Google Scholar

Google/Scholar is an external search engine. Scholar can experience difficulties due to high usage, you may need to alternatively access Scholar by closing your browser, starting a new browser session and visiting scholar.google.com (then configuring Scholar to access UoL licensed resources). The Library recommends use of our licensed search platforms such as DISCOVER and our scholarly databases as the primary option for access to E-Resources. See this guide for assistance when configuring Scholar to access UoL subscribed content.
Online Staff Information

Updated - E-Resource linking for Developers

Please use the updated OpenURL method for linking to E-Resources in online modules, you can create OpenURL links to online books and articles and DOI links (articles/proceedings) or Library Catalogue links (E-Books) if required. See our PDF guide for details. See the LinkBuilder page.

Embedding / Linking Library Web Pages in Modules and Support Pages

Most Library for Online Programmes and Library Training pages provide permalinks in the lower left menu, you can use these to link to Library Web pages. Additionally, you can use ‘embed code’, shown on most Library Training pages:

!Embed code example

You can use the embed code in Web locations such as Blackboard or other systems to directly display Library training content in your required module/Web page, please contact Paul Catherall for further advice (p.catherall@liv.ac.uk / 01517944345):

Also see our PDF guide listing all possible permalinks to Library pages/training and content. Also see the Staff support area: http://libguides.liv.ac.uk/onlineprogrammes/staff
